

A broad-based building team.

Arizona natives Art Cunningham and John Hill of Fountainhead Equity Partners have been building homes and commercial buildings, investing in land, and restoring historic sites around Arizona for more than 12 years. Today, they're bringing their broad-based experience, innovative design, and dedication to quality to Chaparral Pines.

Function comes first.

A beautiful home is nothing without functionality. But because Fountainhead has worked with such diverse projects, it sees homes from more than just a builder's perspective. Fountainhead envisions living areas through the eyes of the homeowner, designing everything from kitchen cabinets to outdoor patios with your comfort and convenience in mind. This steadfast focus on the family's needs sets Fountainhead's designs apart, allowing its homes to offer something different to each owner.

Historic preservation meets dynamic innovation.

Growing up in Arizona, Art Cunningham developed a passion for "preserving the history of Arizona" – and that passion shows in his past projects, which include his involvement in the renovation and restoration of a historic Sedona-area ranch built in 1872. But this love of "old Arizona" isn't reserved just for historic properties. It can also be seen in Fountainhead's new homes, which bring the beauty of Arizona into the home through majestic views and natural details.

Creating the ultimate retreat.

At Chaparral Pines, Fountainhead is best known for creating dramatic mountain estates, complete with features like 18-foot exposed-beam ceilings that complement the area's scenic mountain peaks and natural knotty alder cabinets that reflect the towering forested landscape that surrounds you. Echoes of nature are everywhere in a Fountainhead home – as are modern luxuries like travertine tile, brushed nickel fixtures and granite countertops.

Bringing it all together.

With a building team experienced in everything from avant-garde office space to rustic renovations, it's no wonder Fountainhead has the unique ability to capture environmental elements and meld them with quality materials and ultimate functionality, creating a home both seamlessly in line with nature and firmly connected to everyday modern life.
